The Military Weather Mission

BY BRIG. GEN. W. O. SENTER
Chief, Air Weather Service

THE Korean conflict has served to bring into sharp focus the basic Air Weather Service mission—that of helping the military planner choose the weather for action.

From the inception of hostilities, fully equipped Air Weather Service units from the Pacific area have been on the job at advanced air bases and command posts. Weather officers were placed on the personal staffs of Air Force and Army commanders, and the machinery has been operating in full gear to supply the fighters, bombers and ground troops with a complete meteorological service.

Air Weather Service observers and forecasters in Korea, with native Korean personnel supplied by General Kim, provide meteorological information for U. S. Air Force and Army operations 24 hours per day, while also carrying on round-the-clock exchange of weather information with the Tokyo Weather Central. This Central, located at FEAF Headquarters, in turn, conducts daily briefings of theater staff members on the shifting weather patterns and the climatology of the area, and their predicted effect on tactical and strategic operations. Additionally, it forecasts target weather for the timing of bomber missions flown from different points in the Pacific.

Regular weather reconnaissance tracks, flown by Japan-based WB-29's, have been altered to provide better forecasting coverage for jet fighter missions over Korea. Throughout the Service, an acceleration of weather activities, particularly along the West Coast, in Alaska and the Pacific, was necessary to support the U. S.-Far East airlift operations.

Other aerial reconnaissance squadrons operating in the Western Pacific and Alaskan areas fly regular weather tracks daily with the Pacific unit flying special typhoon tracking missions as these storms occur. The reports become a part of the general weather picture. All ground weather units in the Pacific, Alaska and the Aleutians make substantial contributions to the total effort. The surface and upper air observations from fixed weather stations, combined with the aerial reconnaissance reports are fitted together to form a continuing graphic

Approve New Army Promotion Plan

Highest level approval has been given to the new Army temporary promotion plan, the signal feature of which will substitute temporary date of rank for permanent date of rank in the consideration of Regular officers for advancement.

Concurrently, a statement was issued this week by the Army emphasizing that equal promotion opportunities are assured officers assigned to specialist fields. The text of that statement is published below.

Details of the new promotion program probably will be released in the near future.

Meantime, following approval of the plan, it is presumed that selection boards shortly will begin consideration of officers for temporary promotion. Possibly six to eight weeks will be required for completion of this task, after which a new round of temporary promotions to the ranks of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel is expected.

Heretofore, the permanent date of rank has been all-important in the consideration of Regular officers.

Now, the temporary date of rank will be the basis for selection of Regular officers. This will mean that there will be greater emphasis on the "best qualified" method of selection, as compared to greater reliance heretofore on the "fully qualified" approach.

What will likely result is the designation of relatively deeper zones of consideration being given to the selection boards, as has been forecast in recent issues of THE JOURNAL.

The Army feels apparently that in the temporary promotions made last year the alignment of permanent vs. temporary rank was brought into closer adjustment. In justice to Regular officers whose permanent rank is considerably below temporary grade and in an effort to name the very best officers for advancement, the temporary date of rank now is to be given greater consideration.

Text of Specialist Statement

The following is the text of the Army's statement regarding promotions for officers in specialist fields:

Equal promotion opportunities are assured officers assigned to specialist fields, according to a Department of the Army directive sent to all commands this week. This directive is designed to allay the feeling that assignment to specialist fields will have an adverse effect on the careers of certain Army officers.

The directive reads in part as follows: "The Chief of Staff has directed that necessary steps be taken to insure that officers assigned to specialist fields such as comptrollership, fiscal, legislative liaison, information and education, public information, and scientific are afforded the same opportunity for promotion to all grades, including those of general officer, as is afforded other officers.

"Officers assigned to such specialist work are considered to be following a career field

Medical Dept. Officers

The nomination of Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, MC, USA, to permanent two-star rank, which will permit his retention on active duty; the forthcoming retirement of Rear Adm. Morton D. Willcuts, MC, USN, commanding officer of the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md.; and the recent nominations of Air Force medical officers to general officer ranks are of widespread interest throughout the service.

General Streit, commanding general of the Army Medical Center and Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D. C., became 60 years of age on 18 March, and consequently as a permanent brigadier general would have had to retire on 1 April. Now, with his nomination to be permanent

Combat Pay, Marine Corps, To Be Studied

Hearings on the bill to provide additional pay for Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps personnel during periods of combat duty in Korea will be started next week by the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

Present Senate Committee plans contemplate following the combat pay bill with the measure to establish an increased strength of the Marine Corps and to make its Commandant a permanent member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Meanwhile, the Committee is holding up recent nominations of Air Force generals until it has an opportunity to go further into the choice of Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, to be a temporary major general, Air Force Reserve.

Also in prospect is a possible Congressional investigation of training methods employed by the various Services.

The Marine Corps measure is opposed by the Department of Defense and by the Joint Chiefs of Staff but its popularity in Congress may be judged from the fact that 43 Senators and 63 members of the House of Representatives are sponsoring it.

The combat pay bill, introduced by Chairman Russell at the request of the Department, would authorize $100 a month additional for officers and $50 extra for enlisted persons while actually engaged in combat in Korea.

The Marine Corps bill, while maintaining the Corps "within the Department of the Navy," provides that it shall include four full-strength combat divisions, four full-strength air wings, and such other land combat, aviation, and other services as may be organic therein, and that its personnel strength shall be maintained at not more than 400,000.

That an investigation of training methods used by the Armed Services is imminent is indicated by the interest being taken in the subject by members of Congress on the basis of complaints reaching them that some of the personnel being sent to combat areas are undertrained.

Some members of Congress recall the report of a Senate subcommittee two years ago in relation to an interim study on the operation of selective service and unification acts. This report included a section devoted to "Training Methods and Techniques," in which it was stated:

"Uniformly it is believed that the product of each of the recruit training systems is good. However, methods used to obtain these products are widely divergent and varying in costs.

"Without attempting to arrive at a conclusion as to which is the best way of training recruits, it should be pointed out that the cost of training recruits appears to be considerably greater under the Army system of training than under those of other services. Just how great this difference is requires far more cost analysis than has been made by the staff. However, it is felt that it is a matter of such importance that it should be studied in considerable detail by Nashville, Tenn., Banner—"That joint resolution by the general assembly in praise and recognition of General Clifton B. Cates expresses the esteem of all Tennessee for this distinguished native son. Through it, an honor is accorded on richly deserving it; and to him we would convey, as well, his State's regard for the United States Marine Corps, which he commands. . . . We could not overlook, in a discussion of the Marine Corps or its commanding officer, the propriety of that urgent demand—still before Congress—that the Marine Commandant be made a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, thus giving this unit direct representation there; and that the chairmanship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff be rotated on a fixed schedule to alternate that key office between the services."

New York Times—"In its present phase the battle in Korea is still a war of maneuver, rather than of position, and the first objective is still the destruction of enemy strength wherever contact is made. In the pursuit of this objective it would be fatuous to permit the enemy to find refuge behind a geographic border which he himself first violated, in open defiance of the United Nations."

New York Herald Tribune—"The directives under which General MacArthur is operating sanction, and indeed encourage, the military occupation of all Korea. Experience and second thoughts, however, suggest the advisability of a line well short of the Chinese border."

Baltimore, Md., Sun—"American soldiers will be Korea until some final settlement is reached. That may be a long way in the future. . . . Whatever decision may be made about the Thirty-eighth Parallel, Korea will continue to be the concentrated headache it has been for the past six years."

THE WAR IN KOREA

AMERICAN parachute troops late this week jumped behind enemy lines and cut the main highway leading from Seoul to Kaesong. The operation was under the personal direction of Lt. Gen. Matthew G. Ridgway, commanding the Eighth Army, who landed in the jump zone in a light plane soon after surprise parachute drops began.

The purpose of the maneuver was to cut off a north Korean corps which was withdrawing to the north. However, there were indications that most of the enemy escaped just prior to the operation.

The paratroopers encountered little opposition, and within a few hours were joined by an armored column advancing from the south. At the same time another Allied armored column took the road hub of Uijonabu 20 miles north of Seoul, meeting no enemy resistance.

Tank-led elements of the United States 1st Cavalry Division earlier this week entered the battered Central Korean town of Chunchon, a former Communist stronghold, only 8 miles south of the 38th parallel. They met with no interference.

Apparently the Red troops had abandoned Chunchon and had withdrawn to the north, leaving only light rear guard elements in the hills north and east of the town to harass advancing United Nations forces. Much of the city had been destroyed by air and artillery bombardment. However, some of the frightened residents were still living amid the rubble of the town, and warmly welcomed the American troops.

Light Opposition

In their advance this week the Allied troops, for the most part, encountered only light enemy opposition. Apparently the Reds have withdrawn to previously prepared positions along the 38th parallel.

The important Kimpo airfield, northwest of Seoul, which was recaptured from the Reds several weeks ago, is now in operation, with Allied combat and cargo planes using its long runways. For a time the field was under enemy artillery and mortar fire from north of the Han River, but when the Communist forces were pushed back this menace was eliminated.

Runways and other facilities at the Kimpo field were greatly damaged by demolitions at the time the Allies withdrew last December, and by subsequent Allied air attacks and naval gunfire. This damage necessitated extensive reconstruction, before the field could again be used by United Nations planes.

There was little Red air activity during the week. There were a few weak bombing raids by individual planes on Allied positions, with little damage resulting. On one occasion two Communist planes, through error, bombed and strafed Red ground troops in hill positions near the Allied lines.

Allied fighter planes continuously patrolled the Yalu River near the border, within sight of an enemy airbase at Antung in Manchuria, but most of the time the enemy aircraft avoided conflict. Last weekend in one of the rare aerial combats near Sinuiju in the northwestern corner of Korea at the Manchurian border an enemy jet plane collided with an American fighter plane. Both planes were destroyed in the resultant explosion.

In another encounter between six American F-86 jet fighters and eight enemy MIG-15 jet planes one enemy plane was reported destroyed and one American plane was slightly damaged.

During the week enemy antiaircraft fire was intensified and three American planes were shot down in enemy-occupied territory. All three pilots were rescued by helicopters.

In a day-long Allied air attack on rail transportation a heavy enemy rail movement was disrupted and great damage inflicted on locomotives and boxcars.

The withdrawal of the enemy to defensive positions north of the 38th parallel has aroused speculation as to future operations, both of the enemy and the United Nations forces. The ability of the enemy to launch an immediate new counter-offensive has definitely diminished as a result of losses in recent operations. However, the possibility of such an attack with reinforcements from Manchuria has not been entirely ruled out by military observers.

The approach of Allied troops to the 38th parallel raises the question as to whether the United Nations would relinquish the initiative by stopping at this line. The general belief appears to be that the current Allied offensive will be continued into enemy territory, regardless of this line, so long as it is profitable to do so. Secretary of State Dean Acheson said the matter was under discussion by the Allies, but that no new instructions were necessary to enable the United Nations troops to cross the line.

There is no doubt that the Red strength in Korea has been seriously impaired by the heavy losses inflicted by Allied air and ground attacks. It is estimated that since the current United Nations offensive began on 25 Jan. the Reds have suffered more than 175,000 casualties. Most of these were among the veteran troops of the well-trained Red Chinese Fourth Field Army. The Chinese Third Field Army, previously in the Wonsan area, has been moved into the battle area to bolster the depleted forces which have received the brunt of the recent Allied attacks.

Hit Enemy Supply Lines

During the winter enemy troops consumed practically all of the available food supplies of North Korea, and they are now dependent on their supply lines from Manchuria. These are greatly damaged by the cumulative effect of Allied air and naval bombardment, and it is with the greatest difficulty that the Reds are able to get rations and ammunition to the front. However, as the Allies advance into enemy territory shortened enemy supply lines will make possible the partial supply of Red front-line troops through the use of coolies impressed into service to carry burdens on their backs from Manchuria to dumps in the combat zone during hours of darkness.

The coming of spring brings advantages and disadvantages to both sides. Thawing ground and spring rains turn the roads, poor at best, into quagmires, greatly hampering the movement of Allied tanks, artillery and mechanical transport. At the same time the enemy no longer can cross rivers and streams on ice, and must channel supplies and reinforcements to bridges and fords, vulnerable to air attacks. The longer hours of daylight make it possible to increase appreciably the intensity of Allied air attacks on enemy lines of communication.

Advance Is Cautious

Allied advances on the ground this week in all sectors were slow and cautious, though enemy resistance was largely negligible. The advance was uniform on all fronts, maintaining a relatively straight line across the peninsula. In this way the Allied forces avoided the danger of being drawn into an enemy ambushade, or exposing a flank to a sudden Red counter-attack. The country was thoroughly mopped up as the forward movement progressed, in order to prevent any by-passed enemy group from making trouble behind the lines.

In the area north and northwest of Seoul enemy groups of platoon and company size were contracted by South Korean troops and a series of sharp fire fights resulted. A Puerto Rico task force was taken under small arms, automatic weapons and mortar fire by an enemy battalion north of Seoul.

United States Army elements advanced several miles north of Changgong-ni without contacting the enemy. South Korean troops southwest of Chunchon met light enemy resistance.

South of Chunchon American troops brushed aside light enemy opposition and an armored patrol, followed by infantry, entered the city. None of the enemy was left in the town. Afterwards our troops withdrew to commanding hill positions overlooking the town.

Light to moderate resistance was reported by United Nations forces advancing southeast of Chunchon. Farther east American Army units west and northwest of Pungan-ni encountered enemy forces in company size. Our patrols, aided by artillery and air, dispersed the enemy. Still farther east, Allied forces reported light, scattered contact, while on the east coast South Korean troops advanced with little or no opposition.

Navy Gunfire Effective

Allied warships, deployed along 230 miles of the east coast of Korea, continued throughout the week the bombardment of critical enemy rail and highway supply routes. Combined naval air and surface attacks denied the enemy the use of the important east coast railroad and highway system. Interdiction and harassing fire was provided round the clock.

Late last week the USS Missouri and accompanying warships destroyed an enemy encampment near Wonsan, killing from 7,500 to 8,500 Reds. During the week the pounding of military targets at Wonsan was continued by the Netherlands Destroyer Evertsen and the U. S. Destroyers English, Forrest Royal, Ozbourn, and Hollister. Targets at Chaho were hit by ships of the same group.

Farther north at Chongjin the U. S. Destroyers Frank Knox and McKean prevented repair crews from restoring key bridges. At Songjin the six-inch guns of the U. S. Light Cruiser Manchester fired on supply warehouses and transportation facilities. Also participating in the Songjin bombardment were the U. S. Destroyers Frank Knox, O'Brien and McKean, the Frigate Burlington, and the Destroyer-Minesweeper Carmick.

The British Destroyer Cossack destroyed a mine on the west coast, and the U. S. Frigate Sausalito destroyed two mines on the east coast.

U. S. Navy and Marine pilots, flying Corsairs, Skyraiders and Panther Jets the U. S. Carriers Princeton, Valley Forge and Bataan, struck enemy troops in close tactical support missions, and also hit enemy supply and transport installations in rear areas.

Navy pilots from U. S. Task Force 77 napalmed Red troops on hills and ridges near Pochon, northeast of Seoul, claiming many casualties. Near Munsan, north of Seoul, they attacked Communist troops in trenches and buildings. Marine Corsairs bombed and strafed enemy concentrations in the same general area.

Scores of trucks were hit by Navy planes on the Chaho-Hamhung highway

THE EUROPEAN COMMAND

THE skeletal structure of the Western Powers' command took better form during the week, when General Eisenhower designated the holders of nine posts of great importance, several of them immediately under him as Supreme Commander. They were as follows:

In the Over-All Command

Deputy Supreme Commander—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery (Great Britain).

Deputy Allied Commander for Air—Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Saunders (Great Britain).

In the Northern Sector

Commander-in-Chief—Admiral Sir Patrick Brind (Great Britain). Presumption is that besides being immediately responsible to General Eisenhower for the entire Northern Sector, he will directly command the Allied Naval Forces of the Sector.

Commander Allied Air Forces—Lt. Gen. Robert K. Taylor (currently chief of intelligence for U. S. Forces in Germany).

Commander Allied Land Forces in Denmark—Lt. Gen. Ebbe Goertz (Denmark).

Commander Allied Land Forces in Norway—Lt. Gen. Wilhelm von Tangen Hansteen (Norway).

In the Central Sector

Commander-in-Chief Allied Land Forces—General Alphonse Juin (France).

Commander-in-Chief Allied Air Forces—Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad (America); currently C-in-C U. S. Air Forces in Europe.

Naval Flag Officer for this sector—Vice Admiral Robert Jaujard (France). Note that until the scope of the Central Sector's naval command is determined the duties presently cover only the Rhine Patrol and purely coastal waters; hence the lesser title.

In the Southern Sector

No designations, but an assurance that ultimate command of the land forces alone in this sector will probably go to an Italian Army officer.

Sea Commands Unsettled

It will be observed that there is still uncertainty on a number of points, many of them related to the still unsettled question of the several sea commands. It is well known that the Atlantic Ocean command will go to Admiral William M. Fechteler, USN, but the full extent of his domain is not yet announced. Until it is, there is difficulty in determining not only the exact scope of General Eisenhower's naval responsibility and hence (1) that of his over-all Deputy for Naval Command, who is not yet named and whose office is not even mentioned thus far, (2) that of the Naval Flag Officer for the Central Sector, and (3) that of the whole Southern Sector of SHAPE.

Presumably the Mediterranean is to constitute a command all by itself, cooperative with General Eisenhower's but coequal with it, rather than subordinate to it—occupying a position corresponding to Admiral Fechteler's, for example. It is generally assumed that such a Mediterranean command will go to a British Admiral by reason of Britain's dominant interest in an area which includes Gibraltar, Malta, and Suez. But until the scope of this future Mediterranean command is determined (and this must be on the political level rather than by the Council of Defense) it is impossible to establish a permanent set-up for the Southern Sector of SHAPE, which at the moment is not so much a skeleton as a shadow. Several general observations suggest themselves. General Juin, in whom there is great confidence, will have the most important of the purely land commands, that of the central sector, which presumably includes the territory of all the Allied Powers on the continent south and west of Denmark and north of Italy. But whereas there is a Command-in-Chief of all forces in the less important Northern sector, none is so designated for the Central zone. This suggests that General Eisenhower intends to exercise not only his Supreme Command in all of western Europe but also an immediate field command over all forces in the vitally important Center sector.

Further, whereas in the overall establishment Marshal Saunders is specifically named as Air deputy, and it is mentioned that a naval deputy too may be named, there is no firm designation of a ground forces deputy, present or prospective. Marshal Montgomery is to be General Eisenhower's principal deputy rather than merely the ground forces commander. Again it appears that (as in World War II) General Eisenhower is firmly planning to be his own ground force commander in the most important theaters rather than to be solely in supreme command at headquarters.

With this week's designation of the field commanders, incomplete as it must be until the naval matter is determined, Marshal Montgomery's old headquarters at Fontainebleau (created under the Brussels pact for the Western European Union) will pass out of existence. Their functions will be taken over bodily by the Central Sector, with much of their personnel going to SHAPE itself.

Operational Phase Begins

Likewise SHAPE's purely planning character vanishes, and we may expect, perhaps before this article is printed, the issuance of Operational Order 1, stating that operations have begun. Thus far there are a good many Chiefs in comparison with the number of Indians, but that situation will mend. In the area now are one American division and the equivalent of another, three French divisions, and three British divisions. Expectation is that before 1951 is gone at least two more American divisions will be there, with two more to follow; three more French divisions, with five to follow; one more British division; two Belgians; three to five Italians; and the equivalent of a division from other powers.

Efficiency of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization moves forward with the twelve powers' anticipated approval of Canada's proposal for striking out three or more of the existing committees, and for vesting more control in the Atlantic Council (to be composed of any twelve designated officials rather than simply of the twelve foreign ministers) and thus for enabling SHAPE itself to move more quickly, by reference of doubtful matters to the three-man Standing Committee and thus immediately to the Council. Incidentally, some of the smaller powers are trying to enlarge the Standing Committee membership to six. The attempt will be resisted. The three-man committee (Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Field Marshal Lord Tedder, and Lt. Gen. Paul Ely) functions well. It is the working tool for the twelve-man Military Committee which at any time can correct its actions, if they think it necessary. Six men would not move so fast.

One reads with regret the further declaration of Dr. Kurt Schumacher, the West German Socialist leader, that he will favor German rearmament "when there is equality with troops of other nations in defense; he is opposed to rearmament as long as Allied defense plans are aimed at retreat." This last of course stems from the blundering public announcement of a fragment of General Eisenhower's supposedly secret testimony, referred to in this column a week ago. The whole testimony would have been understood; publication of the fragment was grossly unfair to General Eisenhower and, as Schumacher's words show, most injurious to the plans for western defense.

White House at Key West

As President Truman returned to Washington this weekend to spend Easter with his family, the U. S. Naval Base at Key West, Fla., settled back into a routine existence, shorn of super-security measures, Secret Service men, stars and gold braid, and swarming dignitaries.

Key West, the last inhabited island in the Florida chain of keys, 55 miles southwest of Cape Sable, in the Gulf of Mexico, has come into national prominence in recent years due to frequent visits of the President. The Navy, however, has maintained a base there since 1914.

Shortly before World War I, the Navy established a seaplane patrol base on the key (formerly called Thompson's Island), but the base was placed in a maintenance status at the war's end and not reopened until 1939.

With the advent of World War II, neutrality patrol operations in the Atlantic caused the Key to be put back into operation as a patrol base and, in June of 1941, a contract was let for the construction of seaplane ramps, parking, and quarters for 440 officers and men. Later, the Navy constructed minor repair facilities at the base, expanded it to provide quarters for 4,700 officers and men, opened an underwater sound school on the Key, and constructed a 150-bed hospital which received its first patients in October 1942, six days after commissioning.

Currently, the base, commanded by Capt. C. C. Adell, consists of the Fleet Sonar School, Naval Station, the Navy Hospital and a Naval Air Station. The primary function of the station is to provide logistic support to the other activities on the island, and the sonar school and air station conduct training in anti-submarine warfare. Both submarines and surface ships operate out of the base.

When vacationing at Key West, the President and his party occupy the one-time quarters of the commandant—now called The Little White House—which consists of two houses combined into one. The quarters, converted several years prior to the Presidential visits, were badly in need of repair, due to termite destruction, until about 1948, at which time funds were appropriated to overhaul the building. Repairs consisted of modernizing the quarters, enlarging the rooms and redecorating the building throughout. Originally constructed in the days when the commandant of a Naval base had several servants assigned to him, the quarters became something of a white elephant when these privileges were abandoned.

The present commandant, Captain Adell, lives in regular officers' quarters elsewhere on the base, and the Little White House is empty during most of the year except for a permanent yard boy who looks after the grounds. Occasionally, the President may "loan" the building out to a government official or prominent statesman, personages like Warren Austin, U. S. delegate to the United Nations, who spent several weeks there in 1948 when he was in poor health.

Although the Navy states that there is no disruption of the normal routine of the base during Presidential visits, there are a number of notable changes. Chief among these are the added security measures which are enforced.

Four members of the Marine detachment at the base mount guard at the Little White House the day before the President's scheduled arrival, remain on continuous duty at the quarters during his visit, and do not leave until about one hour after the President has departed. The only persons the guards permit to enter the building are those holding Presidential party passes.

All general visiting at the base is discontinued during the President's stay, and military sentries patrol the beach where he swims. In addition, the White House secret service detachment accompanies the President on the trip, and one of the T-men drives the President wherever he goes on the island.

Most of the Presidential party—which includes only men—is quartered along with the Chief Executive in the Little White House. Any overflow occupies another set of quarters which are at the President's disposal, and newsmen and the secret service are farmed out to the Naval Station bachelor officers' quarters.

The Presidential yacht Williamsburg accompanies the President on the trips and is moored about 100 yards from his quarters. When Mrs. Truman and the President's daughter accompany him on the trip, they live aboard the yacht.

About three days before the President arrives, stewards from the White House in Washington are flown down to ready the house and stock it with provisions. In the early days of the President's visits, Navy personnel on the base often referred to the impending arrival as "Operation Frantic," largely because the quarters were not then completely equipped and a hurried call would have to be flashed to wives of the base personnel to furnish extra ash trays, cigarette boxes, vases, electric fans and other items for the use of the Presidential party.

Key West, itself, offers very little attraction for the tourist. Although it has a tropical climate, with an all year 'round average temperature of 77°, and the weather is very comfortable both day and night during the winter months, the summers are hot and humid with temperatures often soaring to 100°. From June to October, the island is engulfed with rain, which often also coincides with violent hurricanes.

There is little entertainment except for deep sea fishing, which the President usually engages in during his stay, and few bathing beaches. The small beach used by the President is policed by military prisoners and posted with sentries.

Shrimp fishing, which has been developed since 1948, is the only sizable industry, and the Naval personnel, numbering around 5,000, constitute about one-fifth of the entire population of the key. Most of the inhabitants are of Cuban descent, but there is a fairly large negro population and a number of retired military personnel. Spanish-Creole is the predominant language on the island.

Key West is connected with the Florida mainland by a 2-3 lane highway which runs down through the keys from Miami, and over a seven-mile long bridge—reputedly the largest overwater bridge in the world. Most of the food, clothing and so forth is trucked onto the island over the highway, and a Navy-constructed pipeline, extending from Homestead, just south of Miami, carries fresh water onto the Key. Before the Navy completed the pipeline, the island depended largely on rain water collected in cisterns during the rainy season.

For the most part, the Naval base at Key West seems to relish the Presidential visits. One officer stationed at the base stated that the cessation of general visiting while the President is there "actually simplifies the work load of the station," and that the visits are "a big help to the station in general."

On several occasions, while at Key West, Mr. Truman has presided at graduation exercises and handed out diplomas to the graduates of the Sonar School. The last thing he does before his departure is to review the Marine guard detachment—about 20 men—as a token of appreciation for the long watches they have stood during his visit.

Reenlistment Allowances

Legislation which would rectify the injustice which has been done to enlisted personnel of the Armed Forces who reenlisted for an unspecified period of time prior to 1 Oct. 1949 when the Career Compensation Act became effective has been introduced in Congress.

Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex), who is at work on an omnibus bill of amendments to the Career Compensation Act, has submitted H.R. 3366 as a separate bill to take care of those enlisted men mentioned above.

It is recalled that the men who reenlisted for an indefinite period prior to 1 Oct. were to receive $50 a year; but the Career Compensation Act knocked this payment out for those personnel.

Consequently, Representative Kilday's bill stipulates that "persons in an enlistment for an unspecified period of time, entered into prior to 1 October, 1949, shall be paid $110 upon the first anniversary date of such enlistment subsequent to 30 September 1949 and $60 upon each anniversary date thereafter; subject to the limitations that the total amount paid after 1 October 1949 shall not exceed

$1,440. Provided further, that no payment shall be made for any period subsequent to the completion of 30 years' service."

The fact that Representative Kilday introduced this bill separate from the forthcoming omnibus bill of amendments indicates his concern for equitable treatment to these enlisted men.

Gen. Fleming Appointed Envoy to Costa Rica

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, USA-Ret., was nominated by President Truman on 19 March to be Ambassador to Costa Rica. General Fleming has been Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation since 24 July 1950.

Although he has served in civilian administrative and executive positions since long before his retirement for physical disability in 1947, this is General Fleming's first appointment to the diplomatic service.

Born at Burlington, Ia., 15 Oct. 1887, General Fleming attended the University of Wisconsin and then was appointed to the U. S. Military Academy. He was graduated in 1911 at the head of his class and entered the Corps of Engineers. During the next two years he attended the Army Engineering School.

During the first World War he served as a colonel, later reverting to his permanent rank of captain. He was promoted to major in 1920, lieutenant colonel in 1935, colonel in 1940, temporary brigadier general in 1941 and to temporary major general in Nov. 1942. He was retired as a major general on 31 Jan. 1947.

General Fleming was Executive Officer and Deputy Administrator of the Public Works Administration from 1933 to 1935. He was in charge of the Passamaquoddy Project from 1935 to 1936, and he was Coordinator of the Resettlement Administration from 1936 to 1937. He was appointed District Engineer at St. Paul, Minn., in 1937, where he was in charge of improvements on the Upper Mississippi River for two years.

He was appointed Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor in Oct. 1939, and served until Dec. 10 1941, when he was named Administrator of the Federal Works Agency.

At the close of the war, he liquidated the office of War Mobilization and Reconstruction, the Civilian Production Administration, the Office of Economic Stabilization and the Office of Price Administration.

At the request of the President, General Fleming toured Europe, North Africa and Russia in 1944 and 1945 to study reconstruction problems. In 1946, he made a 5,000-mile tour of India to study and recommend methods of highway improvement to the Indian Government.

General Fleming was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by President Truman for "outstanding service to the Government," on 7 May 1946.

He is first vice-president of the Pan-American Division of the American Road Builders' Association.

General Fleming is married, has a son, Carson; a daughter, Mrs. Franklin Gutches; and two grandchildren.

Regular Army Promotions

In last week's issue of THE JOURNAL there were published the names of a number of Regular Army officers nominated by the President for higher permanent rank.

These lists were in alphabetical form, as sent to the Senate by the White House.

This week, Army officials made available General Orders No. 5, dated 14 Feb., containing the recommended lists for promotion to lieutenant colonel, major and captain, Army Promotion List; lieutenant colonel, major and captain, Army Medical Service, and captain, Judge Advocate General's Corps.

The names of officers selected for permanent promotion to lieutenant colonel, major and captain on the Army Promotion List were published in the 17 Feb. issue of THE JOURNAL in order of seniority.

The junior officer nominated for permanent promotion to lieutenant colonel, as reported last week, was Henry M. Clisson, Number 418 among a total of 585 officers selected for advancement to permanent lieutenant colonel. The remaining officers will be nominated later for confirmation by the Senate.

The junior officer nominated for promotion to permanent major was Ernest C. Dameron, who is Number 248 among a total of 909 selected for permanent advancement to major.

The junior officer nominated for promotion to permanent captain was Thomas A. Cook, Number 124, among 576 officers selected.

An unofficial analysis of nominations for advancement of Medical Service officers, sent to the Senate last week, shows that all officers selected for advancement were nominated, except for captains of the Medical Service Corps. As reported in last week's issue, there were nine nominations for promotion to permanent captain, Medical Service Corps, but General Orders No. 5 indicates that a total of 30 officers were selected, as follows, of which the first 9 were nominated for promotion, the others to be nominated later:

Camp San Luis Obispo

Maj. Gen. C. D. O'Sullivan, The Adjutant General of California, commenting this week on a recent Department of Defense release regarding the possible "re-acquisition and immediate reactivation" of the State-owned California National Guard training site, Camp San Luis Obispo, declared that "nothing has been agreed upon, in fact we do not even have a starting point." "However," he added, "the State of California will cooperate with Federal officials in every way possible and will not inject any delays into the negotiations."

"We have knowledge of the Army's interest in and desire to obtain the use of our National Guard training facilities," General O'Sullivan stated, "and conferences are now under way concerning its possible use by the Army. However, the site is owned by the State and as yet no terms or conditions have been agreed upon."

Camp San Luis Obispo was procured by the State in 1927 as a training site for the California National Guard. The State also has a right of entry to 4,705 acres of land owned in fee by the Federal Government.

Terminal Leave Pay

The U. S. Court of Claims held 7 March that a temporary officer of the Army whose resignation for the good of the service was accepted is entitled to be paid for unused terminal leave standing to his credit at the time he left the service when his resignation was later changed to a resignation under honorable conditions by the Army Discharge Review Board. It is understood that this holding of the Court of Claims contravenes to a major degree the established policy of the Army that the Armed Forces Leave Act of 1946 does not permit payment for leave accumulated but not granted to officers separated from the service prior to 1 September 1946, the effective date of the Leave Act.

The unanimous decision of the Court of Claims was entered in a suit brought by former Major Thomas H. Whelpley, Chaplain, Army of the United States. According to the Court's findings of fact, the Army accepted the plaintiff's resignation for the good of the service 1 December 1944. Subsequently upon the officer's application, the Army Discharge Review Board directed that the plaintiff's resignation from the service be considered as having been under honorable conditions. Thereupon, the plaintiff requested the Secretary of War to determine the accrued leave to which he was entitled on the basis of his service at the time of his separation and to compensate him for it. Upon the Army's refusal to comply, action was started in the Court of Claims.

The Court, in holding that the plaintiff is entitled to recover, found in effect that the law in existence prior to the Armed Forces Leave Act gave to officers a "vested right" to have that leave. According to the Court, "It would be an unfortunate and unfair interpretation of the statutes and regulations that would result in denying to one honorably discharged officer valuable rights received by other honorably discharged officers merely because of the circumstances that, at the time of his separation, there was a decision, later reversed as of the time of its making, that his separation was not in honorable circumstances."

The plaintiff was represented in his action before the Court of Claims by the firm of Ansell and Ansell.

Promotion Policies

and repeated assignments will not act as a bar to promotion. These officers, as well as all others, are considered for attendance at service schools and are permitted to acquire a broad military background by varied assignments. Since promotions are to be selection based on ability and efficiency as evidenced by complete overall records, it is evident that assignment to a special field will not retard promotion. Further, it must be borne in mind that each of these specialized fields requires officers in the higher grades."

on the east coast and several bridges on the same route were knocked out.

During the week the Far East Air Force averaged nearly 1,000 sorties each day. They encountered very little enemy air opposition, but intense flak in some areas resulted in the loss of three single-seater Allied fighters. However, all three pilots were rescued. One pilot was picked up north of Seoul, and another near Kangnung in Eastern Korea, both by the 3d Air Rescue Squadron. The third rescue was made by a Navy helicopter in the water off the coast near Wonsan.

Fighters, fighter-bombers and light bombers of the Fifth Air Force rained bombs and machinegun fire on enemy troops throughout the rear areas, and carried out numerous close support missions. Many rail and highway bridges were destroyed or damaged and several trains were attacked.

On last Wednesday the focus of the air attack was on a large-scale Communist rail movement in northwest Korea. Fifteen locomotives and approximately 280 boxcars were destroyed or damaged. The attacks were begun before dawn on Wednesday by American B-26 light bombers, and were continued throughout the day, with fighters and fighter-bombers also participating.

Wreck Rail Lines

The attacks left the rail lines from Sinuiju, in northwest Korea, through Sinanju toward Pyongyang, cluttered with wrecked locomotives and burned-out boxcars. Twelve of the locomotives and most of the boxcars were classified as destroyed. This heavy raid greatly impairs the ability of the enemy to supply and reinforce front-line troops along the important western route.

Numerous trucks and other vehicles were observed and brought under attack, with hundreds destroyed or damaged. Hundreds of casualties were inflicted on enemy troops. Several bridges on the rail route from Yonghung through Wonsan, leading to the Red supply and assembly area at Chorwon were knocked out. This route is one of the main enemy supply lines.

Superforts from Okinawa dropped many tons of high explosives on barracks and marshalling yards at Hamhung near the east coast. Other B-29 medium bombers hit supply storage areas at Sariwon, Kumhwa, Kumchon and Chorwon. Excellent results were reported.

Col. Paul L. Freeman, USA, recently wounded in Korea while commanding the 23d Infantry Regiment of the 2d Division, and now on duty in Washington, said this week that the Communist troops in Korea had been seriously hurt by heavy casualties and by losses due to disease and the extremely cold weather of the past winter.

American weapons, the colonel asserted, are superior to those of the enemy. Red troops, he said, prefer close-in fighting where their superior numbers count most effectively, and where they can use their favorite weapon, the hand grenade. Col. Freeman said that he did not think the operations in Korea pointed to the need of any radical change in American Army training technique, but he stressed the necessity for increased emphasis on the physical conditioning of soldiers.

General Officers Nominated

The President sent the following nominations to the Senate on 22 March:

Maj. Gen. Paul Henry Strelt, AUS, (Brig. Gen., MC, USA) for appointment as Major General, Medical Corps in the Regular Army.

Brig. Gen. James Clyde Fry, AUS, (Col. USA) for appointment as Brigadier General in the Regular Army.

To be Brigadier Generals, Temporary: Col. Archelaus Lewis Hamblen, USA, and Col. Anthony Joseph Drexel Biddle, Jr., AUS.

4 ways to lighten your EMERGENCY WORK-LOAD

KARDEX VISIBLE FOR GRAPHIC CONTROL AND GREATER CLERICAL PRODUCTIVITY

Are certain records of yours "hard to get at"...clumsy to use? Check with us on the advantages of having them set up in Kardex Visible—"tailored" systems that not only speed up routine posting and reference but display key facts in convenient chart form for close, accurate administrative control. Many other types of Remington Rand Visible Equipment—including rapid-reference index units, mobile units, book units and control boards—also are available. U. S. Government Contract TS-27574, Item 54-F-2325.

VARIADIX—THE HIGH-SPEED FILING SYSTEM THAT EXPANDS WITHOUT WASTE

See the difference? As AA-AC papers accumulate and require subdivision, the conventional system compels you to discard the AA-AC guide. With Variadex you merely add new guides as you need them. No waste. And Variadex makes finding faster by as much as 80% through color selectivity—less reading of guides is required. Experience-proved Variadex tailors neatly, and economically, to your filing volume, large or small, in any standard or special card or paper size. U. S. Government Contract GS-003-2743, Dec. 1, 1950 to Nov. 30, 1951, Item 53-F-7010(b).

Housing at Patuxent NAS

An $8,000,000 project to provide permanent housing at the Patuxent River (Md) Naval Air Station is being shaped:

The architect for the project said the plans are nearly complete, and that general bids will be asked about 1 April.

Consisting of 1,000 units—900 for married enlisted men and 100 for officers—the project should be completed within 18 months, the Navy said, although it may be finished within a year.

Planned rentals will be about $67.50 for two-bedroom units, which will number 600. The rest will be one and three-bedroom units, with rents scaled accordingly.

The project will consist of 110 row-type structures of two stories and measuring 100 to 160 feet in length.

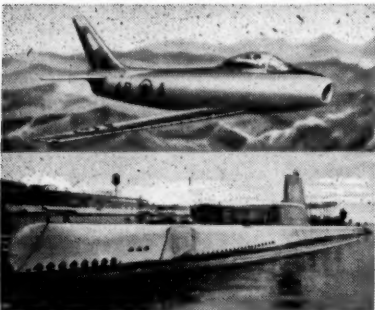

Salvage of WW II Ships

The Navy has called for bids from private companies for salvage of sunken and beached World War II ships on and around Pacific Islands. The purpose is to help solve a growing shortage of iron and steel scrap.

Navy estimates reveal there is a possibility of recovering more than 400,000 tons of metal scrap from vessels at Palau, Saipan and Truk. These estimates are the result of a preliminary survey of those island areas.

"If the plan proves successful and economical, similar operations will be attempted in other Pacific areas," the Navy said.

Practically all sunken or beached vessels at Palau, Saipan and Truk are former Japanese warships or merchantmen. The cruisers Agano, Naka, Yubari and Katori, five destroyers and 13 submarines are in the vicinity of these islands. The ex-Japanese ships are considered prizes of war and are at the disposal of the United States.

New Marine Combat Team

The Marine Corps will soon increase its fighting potential by the addition of a new regimental combat team.

Reports of the planned formation of such a team—an infantry regiment with supporting arms—have been current for several weeks, but measures introduced in Congress had asked for a decidedly greater increase.

The new combat team, which will be in addition to the two Fleet Marine Force Divisions now maintained, will be commanded, organized and trained by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, who is being returned from Korea to command the new unit.

No details about the team or where it will be formed were revealed. General Puller, holder of four Navy Crosses, commanded the 1st Marine Regiment in Korean fighting from the Inchon invasion until recently when his promotion elevated him to assistant commander of the 1st Marine Division.

Marine Selection Boards

Selection and Naval Examining Boards to consider both active and inactive Marine Corps Reserve officers in all grades for promotion will be convened during April.

Tentative dates are:

Colonel—17 April
Lt. Col.—17 April
Major—24 April
Captain—10 April

Promotion zones for consideration in the various ranks include those officers senior to Lt. Col. Charles E. Adams (04804), Maj. Edgar J. Johnson (08146), and Capt. Milan B. Johnson (09666), on the tentative lineal list of MCR officers with running mates, promulgated by serial MC-1252290, dated 7 Nov. 1950, as modified.

First lieutenants will be considered whose date of rank as second lieutenant was 25 Oct. 1944 or earlier.

Although present service-in-grade requirements remain in effect, Marine Corps Headquarters said that it has recommended to the Secretary of the Navy that he waive the requirement that such service be satisfactory Federal service.

Navy History On TV

A television history of the United States Navy from the period immediately prior to World War II and leading up to the present—the first of its kind—will be produced by the National Broadcasting Company, in cooperation with the Department of the Navy.

The series represents the National Broadcasting Company's first major effort to establish a pioneering pattern for presenting history by television. Under Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball commended NBC's enterprise in preparing this series. He appeared on "Battle Report," NBC's public service program from Washington.

"The Navy is happy to be able to cooperate with the National Broadcasting Company in the preparation of this series," Under Secretary Kimball said. "Navy and NBC technicians are preparing to screen literally hundreds of thousands of feet of official Navy film to pick out the very best for presentation to the American public. Much of this film for security reasons has never before been exhibited. NBC's television techniques plus the technical skill of the Navy Photographic Center should be able to combine to produce a memorable series."

The joint NBC-Navy-Marine Corps venture will employ official motion picture films, hitherto unreleased, with every major action from the historic shelling of the USS Panay in China waters in 1937 down to the present, including recent United Nations actions.

Captain Selection Board

Convened at USAF Headquarters on 12 March, the selection board to name officers for permanent promotion to captain has completed its assignment.

However, names of officers to be included on the recommended list will not be released until after the President has approved the board's findings.

Administrative details preparatory to sending the list to the White House were being made late this week and the expectation was that the list would be made available for publication in approximately two weeks.

The 18th Air Force (Troop Carrier) of TAC will combine under one organization all troop carrier units stationed in the Continental United States.

It will provide one headquarters with the primary mission of carrying out the troop carrier responsibilities of the Air Force in conjunction with all other armed forces of the National Military Establishment.

The Commanding General of the 18th will be announced in the near future.

Graduate AF Medical Course

Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow, USAF-Ret., first Surgeon General of the Air Force, delivered the graduation address last week for a class of more than 65 Aviation Medical Examiners at the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine.

Composed of regular, National Guard and reserve medical officers, the class was the largest to graduate at the aeromedical school since World War II. Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, USAF, Commandant of the School of Aviation Medicine, following General Grow's address.

Following six weeks of intensive training, the graduates are now qualified for duty with Air Force units, where their primary mission will be to conduct physical examinations for flying. They will not, however, receive their Aviation Medical Examiner ratings until successfully completing a three-months preceptorship, during which period each must log 25 hours flying time in military aircraft and conduct 50 physical examinations for flying. The postgraduate preceptorship was initiated after the AME course was reduced from 11 to six weeks of formal training due to the rapid expansion of the Air Force.

Review of Retired Restrictions Overdue

The imminent initiation of Appropriations Committee hearings on the military budget for fiscal year 1952—testimony will begin next month—prompts a conclusion that a review of restrictions against retired personnel of the Armed Forces is long overdue.

The fact of the matter is that both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees, in acting upon military budget requests last year, called upon the Armed Services Committees to study this matter; yet nothing has been done.

It is the declared conclusion of the Appropriations Committees that statutory provisions concerning civilian employment of retired military personnel should not be included in appropriations legislation, despite the fact that such has been the case during recent years.

If the Senate or House Armed Services Committees should launch hearings on the recommendations made by the Appropriations Committees the whole field of burdensome restrictions on employment of retired military personnel would be thrown open.

Then, such factors as the issue of dual "employment," reviewed in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, could be surveyed. Undoubtedly, gross inequities could then be rectified.

Insofar as the restrictive provisos in appropriations legislation are concerned, it is recalled that the Senate Appropriations Committee, in reporting the General Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 1951, declared that the Armed Services Committee should launch an investigation into restrictions against retired officers engaged in business negotiations with the Department of Defense, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service.

Similarly, the House Appropriations Committee reported the need for an Armed Services inquiry, as follows:

"More than 100 years ago the House established the practice of striking out of appropriation bills such portions as contain legislation. The rule has been adhered to strictly at times and other times not so strictly.

"During the past few years appropriation bills have contained numerous legislative provisions usually for the reason that some temporary purpose needed to be accomplished and would expire at the end of the fiscal year.

"However," the House Appropriations Committee report continues, "too many such provisions have appeared year after year with no thought of permitting them to expire at the end of any particular period. Provisions of this nature should be removed from appropriations bills and referred to the proper legislative committee for more thorough consideration than is possible for an appropriation committee to give even though it had proper jurisdiction of the matter.

"This committee does not desire to get into the legislative field and suggests to the respective departments and the Bureau of the Budget that every effort be made to clear all military requests for appropriations of provisions not supported by statutory authority.

"Several of the provisions proposed in the budget presentation under general provisions have been eliminated by the committee on the ground that they are legislation and should be considered by the Committee on Armed Services.

"Contact with that Committee," concludes the report, "indicates that they are willing to consider these matters and, in fact, have before them pending legislation dealing with some of the subject matter in question."

Almost a year has gone by since the Appropriations Committees made these recommendations and nothing has been done to resolve this problem. As a result, unless remedial action is taken shortly, the likelihood is that restrictive provisions against retired officers will again, as in recent years, be incorporated into the Appropriations Bill without detailed study. Consequently, discrimination which has persisted against retired officers would remain in effect, notwithstanding the absence of the recommended investigations by the Armed Services Committees.

For example, as has been pointed out repeatedly by THE JOURNAL, retired Regular officers—and this includes Chief Warrant Officers of the Navy, but not of the Army and Air Force—are penalized considerably in comparison with retired non-Regular officers. Further, the amount of retired pay received is given no consideration at all; for it has been shown that in numerous cases retired Regular officers are receiving considerably less in retired pay than enlisted men and warrant officers. The officers are placed under serious restrictions as to civilian employment, both by the government and by private industry which may do business with government agencies, while the enlisted men and warrant officers, although receiving greater pay, are not subjected to these limitations.

Although Congress repeatedly has declared that it wants the Government to give veterans who have served in the Armed Forces during a period of war every benefit possible in obtaining employment, patently retired Regular officers are not being considered as veterans in this regard.

It is becoming increasingly obvious, particularly in view of the current national emergency, that a sweeping study of restrictions against retired military personnel is necessary. The dual "employment" and appropriations bill restrictive provisions are but two aspects of this matter, but are ones which require immediate Congressional consideration in view of the bill, S. 351, which would raise from $3,000 to $5,000 the compensation limit for retired Regular officers employed by the Government, and in view of the imminent hearings on the fiscal year 1952 budget.

Pershing Rifles Seek Alumni

The National Society of Pershing Rifles is endeavoring to contact as many of its alumni as possible in connection with establishment of an alumni organization at National Headquarters, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

The Society was founded in 1892 by the late General of the Armies John J. Pershing at the University of Nebraska.

CADUCEUS INSIGNIA

Congress authorized the caduceus as a part of the arm insignia for hospital stewards in 1757 and in 1901 substituted it for the cross as the collar ornament for the Army Medical Corps.

ARMA ANALOGUE COMPUTER

The Analogue Computer has long held a high place in Arma's work in such specialized fields as automatic gun-laying and torpedo-data computing for the U.S. Navy. Its present wider application to the needs of the other Services stems largely from accelerated post-war engineering at Arma, which resulted in miniaturizing its components and at the same time making them interchangeable and more accurate.

By this Arma development, the Analogue Computer has reached a new level of importance as a contributing factor in the high accuracy of American arms. It is typical of many things developed by Arma engineers to aid in making America safe against those who wish to destroy it.

"There is a very urgent and realistic need for providing additional compensation to combat personnel who are subjected to extra hazards resulting from combat duty in immediate opposition to the enemy."—DEPT. OF DEFENSE LETTER TO CONGRESS, 24 JAN. '51.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Establishment and operation of a Universal Training and Service program and the building up of readiness for industrial production for war as bases for an "enduring system of National Defense."
2. Continued scientific research and development, particularly in all new and unconventional devices and methods of warfare.
3. Revision of Career Compensation Act to correct injustices demonstrated by experience, including adequate compensation of junior officers with long service in enlisted grades. Permanent legislation for special pay for personnel actually engaged in combat with the enemy. More realistic allowances, including those for travel and per diem. Improved retirement pay for disabled and wounded personnel.
4. Early construction of adequate government quarters for Service personnel at all permanent stations, supplemented by government-sponsored private construction to meet expansion needs.
5. Continuance and extension of medical and dental care for Service families; provision for education at government expense of children of Service personnel at stations where suitable free public schools are not available; and survivor benefits for dependents.
6. Restoration of military exemptions from Federal Income Tax, broadened to exclude all retired pay from taxation. Recall to active duty of militarily useful retired officers, together with liberalization of ban on dual compensation so that the government may utilize fully the services of all capable retired personnel.
7. A satisfactory and orderly promotion system for warrant officers to assure all qualified appointees of reaching top grade prior to retirement.
8. Adjustment of promotion procedures to meet current emergency needs and to assure retention on active duty of all qualified officers.

Threaten Services' Hospitals and Engineers.

In an effort to get before Congress bills covering all phases of the recommendations of the Hoover Commission, organized proponents of the plan have brought about the introduction of two that carry particular threats to the efficiency of the Armed Forces. One of these would deprive the Services of most of their hospitals and dispensaries by transferring them to the control of a proposed Department of Health. The other would strip the Army Corps of Engineers of its functions with respect to rivers and harbors and flood control. Fortunately for the interests of National Defense both of these bills have been referred to the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments, the chairman of which is Senator John L. McClellan (D-Ark). Senator McClellan was a member of the Hoover Commission and is thoroughly familiar with the motives that led to these recommendations. He is likewise thoroughly aware of their threat to the national defense, and with that knowledge he joined with other commissioners in two minority reports strongly disagreeing with these particular recommendations. When the Commission recommended taking the hospitals and dispensaries from the Services, Senator McClellan concurred with Representative Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio) in an opposition report which concluded that "It would be ill-advised and foolish to injure or destroy those medical services of the Armed Forces which made such an outstanding record of saving precious American lives in World War II in order to effect economies and efficiencies which can just as easily be obtained through other methods." As to the recommendation to take rivers and harbors and flood control from the Corps of Engineers, Senator McClellan and former Representative Carter Manasco submitted a lengthy minority report that concluded: "In the interest of economic progress and National Security, the Congress should repel this assault upon one of the most efficient agencies of the Government by rejecting the unsound and dangerous recommendations of the majority." To get the plan before Congress, Senator McClellan introduced, "by request," a number of bills, including the one transferring the hospitals. Senator O'Connor (D-Md) introduced the one to strip the Corps of Engineers. However, Senator McClellan told THE JOURNAL that while he will bring the bills before his committee and give everyone a chance to be heard, the fact that he introduced some of them does not commit him to support them. Instead, he declared, he reserves the right "to amend, modify or outright oppose them." In light of the fact that there will be a great deal of organized pressure behind these proposals, it is comforting to know that the chairman of the committee is one so thoroughly versed in their dangerous implications to the National Defense.

Poor Time for Pay Cut. In spite of the steep increases in prices since the enactment of the Career Compensation Act nearly two years ago, the Department of Defense has ordered a 25 per cent reduction in travel allowances for officers, effective 1 April. The step was a belated conformance with the 1949 pay act which directed that regulations be issued fixing the travel allowances of officers and enlisted personnel at not more than seven cents a mile. Instead of raising the enlisted rate to this figure, the Department temporized by

Consider Both Ranks

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I recommend that eligibility for promotion be based on both the temporary and permanent dates of rank. For example, for promotion to Lt. Col. it might be directed that all officers whose temporary date of rank as Majors is prior to be considered and also all officers whose promotion list number is lower than be considered. The selection board may well be told to give a certain weight to time in grade. In this manner one of the goals of the new promotion law might be better achieved (among other things accomplished), namely, to give the outstanding officers from both groups a chance at promotion. The selections should be made on the "best qualified basis, of course.

Since the co-existence of the two promotion lists is apparently here to stay, why not make the best of it?

Forced Retirements

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I would like to add an Army "Amen" to the U. S. Navy Commander's article "Loss of Flag Officers" in your 10 Feb. issue.

What has amazed me is the JOURNAL's opinion that the Army will go to pot if our senior officers are forced to retire upon completion of 30 years service. Surely there are plenty of able replacements to fill their shoes. If not then I'll say let's throw in the sponge.

Identification by A.G.O. Cards

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

On a recent visit to Cuba, the manager of the hotel in which I was staying consulted me concerning an American who had gone broke and was frantically attempting to cash a check. The manager had lost considerable money by doing this in the past and was in doubt. I talked to the man, who showed me an A.G.O. card as a reserve officer. On my recommendation his check was cashed. The hotel manager subsequently established a policy of cashing checks for compromising—enlisted travel was raised from three to six cents and officers were cut from eight to six. Now, the Department of the Air Force and the Department of the Army have let it be known that they will encourage personnel traveling under the new allowances to submit to them data on actual costs incurred. Meanwhile the losses suffered in travel on government business will come out of the already inadequate pay of the officers.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago

Prime Minister Churchill reveals that the Nazis have extended their operations in the Battle of the Atlantic as far west as the forty-second meridian of longitude: "Not only German U-boats, but German battle cruisers have crossed to the American side of the Atlantic and have already sunk some of our independently routed ships not sailing in convoy."

50 Years Ago

Those who predicted that all sorts of mishaps would befall Germany when the young Emperor let Bismarck pass into oblivion and took into his own inexperienced hands the reins of government may well regard the German Naval League with wonder. From his very earliest acts as Emperor, the Navy has taken a larger place in the considerations of the sovereign and in the hopes of the empire than it had been its lot to enjoy in the previous years.

85 Years Ago

The Russian Bear has not always been so inclined to fraternize with the American grizzly as now, when the Muscovite double-headed Eagle is about to shake claws with the Baldheaded Eagle across Behrings Straits. In 1776, the Empress Catherine of Russia agreed to furnish his Majesty (George III, King of England) with 20,000 of her best troops, to be employed in the next campaign in America against our newly declared liberty and rights. This fact is very little known. Political unions have no bases or ties but interest, and Russia's interest is now against, not toward, amity with Great Britain.

members of the Armed Forces providing they have their AGO cards and that they are listed in the official directories on file with the attache at the American Legation in Havana.

"Valid" AF Commissions

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

This letter is written with a sense of frustration, brought to a head by the recent Air Force promotions. Others must be equally frustrated.

The latest list of Lt. Col. appointments is headed by a statement containing the following:

"The following officers were considered:

"1. Air Reserves currently serving in grade of Major, who hold valid commissions as Lt. Col. or higher in Air Reserve * * *."

How valid is a valid commission?

I, for one, have a commission as Lt. Col. in the Air Reserve that looks valid. It is prepared on the proper form, (quite impressive), and is properly signed. Why a promotion board, when I was already appointed? Or isn't it valid after all? Maybe they were just being nice to me, (and us); like patting a little boy on the head and saying, "Run along and play, sonny, and don't bother us anymore."

Perhaps I should be grateful for being allowed to remain in grade, doing my job, carrying my responsibility and maintaining my loyalty. All these things I'll do, of course, but I can't believe that the bright young lads can do the job so much better than those who have demonstrated something equally or more important than youthful brilliance. Nothing will substitute for experience, loyalty, honesty, industry and the ability to progress.

By what standards are they the best qualified? I've made out enough efficiency and effectiveness reports to know that personal feelings cannot be kept out of them—no matter how foolproof they are made. I know, too, that there are those who react more favorably to the blandishments of a "yes" man than to one who has the courage and honesty to say "no," even tactfully.

Sound bitter? I am.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Six nations of western Europe this week initiated a historic document, which, when ratified by the respective parliaments, would abolish national frontiers in the coal and steel industries. The agreement advances a long step forward the highly controversial Schuman plan, under which the production of two vital industries of France, West Germany, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg and Italy would be pooled for marketing under the control of a "supranational" authority.

The plan, initiated ten months ago by Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France, has aroused a great deal of opposition, which may be sufficiently strong to prevent ratification by one or more of the parliaments of the six countries. When and if ratified, the program would be in effect for 50 years, with the first five years a transition period to get the plan into full operation. It is open to other nations to join at any time.

The six countries in the pool will produce next year at the annual rate of 40 million tons of steel and 210 metric tons of coal. This compares with the British annual production of 16 million tons of steel and 214 million tons of coal. Great Britain has declined to pool its production with the other West European countries.

► UNDER THE PLAN the pooled industries would be controlled by a central authority, appointed by the six signatories, and the administration would be responsible to an international parliament, elected by the national legislatures. The pooling of the coal and steel of much of Western Europe could be of great importance in war industry, since it eliminates customs frontiers, and other barriers to the rapid movement of basic materials from mines and mills to fabricating plants. It would permit of concentrated production by two great industries of essential supplies.

Furthermore, the accord may be the means of lessening, if not eliminating, the age-old tension between France and Germany, that has so often led to war, and of promoting economic and possibly political unity of Western Europe, making the vision of a United States of Europe somewhat brighter. If successful the international governmental coal and steel cartel may be broadened to embrace other basic industries. Dispensing with tariff barriers for steel and coal may develop into a trend for the abolition of all Western European customs payments, and the opening of a vast area to free trade among the nations embraced therein.

At this week's sessions of the preliminary meeting of Deputy Foreign Ministers in Paris, Andrei Gromyko, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, surprised the representatives of the western powers by proposing an arms reduction for the United States, France, Great Britain and Russia, with international inspection. Russia had previously proposed proportional arms reduction, but had steadfastly opposed international inspection. The new proposal was rejected by the west because proportional arms reduction at this time would greatly favor Russia, since that country is far in front in the arms race. Furthermore, the Russian plan does not provide for any reduction in the swollen armaments of the Soviet satellite countries.

► IF THE RUSSIAN PROPOSAL for international inspection is sincere, and not made merely for propaganda purposes, there is some small hope that an agreement may be reached on the agenda for the proposed subsequent conference of the Big Four foreign ministers. Should Russia agree to real arms limitations, instead of flat percentage reductions, applicable not only to the conferees, but also for the puppet states, the prospects for tangible results would greatly improve. On the other hand, as is more probable, should Russia refuse any further compromise, it is in a position to contend, for propaganda purposes, that the western powers have rejected the olive branch tendered by the Soviet Union.

The Soviet government this week flatly refused to return to the United States 670 lend-lease ships turned over to that country during the war. The Russian note to the State Department rejects the demand of the United States for the return of the ships and accuses this country of violating a promise to sell the ships to the Soviet Union. State Department officials said there was such an agreement in 1948, conditioned on a prompt and satisfactory settlement of all lend-lease accounts. Since such a settlement was never made the tentative agreement is regarded as no longer valid.

The Iranian parliament this week completed action on the law nationalizing the oil industry, now under long-term lease to a British corporation. This action was unanimously taken by the parliament in response to fanatical anti-foreign demonstrations, which culminated in the assassination of the premier and the attempted murder of a former cabinet minister, both of whom had been friendly to the United States and Great Britain. To quell resultant disorders martial law has been declared in Teheran and environs, with tanks and armored cars patrolling the streets.

The Communists may not have inspired the demonstrations, which were led by an anti-foreign Moslem sect, but they appear to be profiting by them, since they have long advocated the nationalization of oil, to deprive the British of their rich concessions, and make possible their acquisition by oil-hungry Russia. The new law provides for operation of the oil industry by the state, with the aid of foreign experts. It will be interesting to note whether these experts come from Russia, or from a western power.

British press reports, as yet unverified, indicate the possibility of widespread anti-Communist uprisings in the Soviet satellite state of Albania. It is reported, without confirmation, that martial law has been declared, and that more than 1,000 persons have been arrested and many executed.

► PRESIDENT VINCENT AURIOL of France left home this week for an eleven-day visit to the United States and Canada. It was not a particularly auspicious departure, as he leaves France in a state of labor unrest and with an uneasy parliamentary situation. He was forced to motor to the port from Paris, since a transportation strike had tied up the railroads. During his stay in the United States he will call on the President, address a joint session of Congress, and visit the Military and Naval Academies and the United Nations.

In the United States Senate efforts to get action before Easter on the resolution approving, with reservations, the sending of additional troops to Europe under the Atlantic Treaty have failed. Members of the Senate are sharply divided on the meaning of that portion of the resolution which calls for Congressional approval before troops, other than the four divisions now scheduled for Europe, are sent. Some contend that under the proposal it would be necessary to pass a law before each new increment could be dispatched, while others hold that it would be sufficient for the President to consult with appropriate Congressional committees before taking action.

Atom Weapons Tests—The Atomic Energy Commission announced this week, in response to inquiries from the American Institute of Architects, that test programs at the Commission's Eniwetok Proving Ground in the Pacific include extensive provisions for measurement of atomic weapons effects on structures and materials of various kinds.

The Commission has advised the AIA that a major project is being carried out to supplement data already obtained from other atomic blasts, with instrumentation specifically arranged to provide data for the development of design criteria needed by architects. This information will be made available to the Civil Defense Administration.

The test program at Eniwetok is being carried out by Joint Task Force Three, commanded by Lt. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, USAF, and is made up of personnel of the Armed Services, AEC, other civil agencies of the government, and AEC contractors. In order to assure the safety of vessels and aircraft operating in the central Pacific, only units of the Task Force are permitted within the danger area around Eniwetok Atoll.

Full security restrictions as required by the Atomic Energy Act apply to all phases of the test program. No further information as to the composition, movement or operations of the Task Force has been authorized for public release at this time.

Royal Navy Jet Squadrons—Squadrons of jet fighters will be joining aircraft carriers of the Royal Navy this year. These squadrons will be made up of Vickers Supermarine Attackers which are now completing their final tests before going into service as carrier-groups. One of the first carriers to be completely jet-equipped will be the new 36,800-ton Eagle, which is to be commissioned this summer. The Royal Navy has 12 aircraft carriers in all, against 11 at the wartime peak. When the programme of construction is complete, there will be 18, including the Eagle, the new Ark Royal and the four Hermes light fleet carriers.

Before next March, Hawker Sea Hawks will also be joining the squadrons. The Sea Hawk, whose performance is secret, rivals land-based fighters for speed and maneuverability. Both the Attacker and the Sea Hawk are powered by the Rolls-Royce Nene engine of 5,000 lb. thrust.

Navy Officer Holds EM Record—Paradoxically, a lieutenant is the oldest Navy enlisted man, from the standpoint of continuous active service, now on active duty. Chief Musician Alexander Cecil Morris, a lieutenant, heads the Navy longevity list for enlisted men. Mr. Morris, who is the leader of the U. S. Naval Academy band, holds the rank of lieutenant while in his present assignment. He is 62 years old and has completed more than 43 years of active service. Only three active Naval officers have longer stretches of continuous active duty. They are Fleet Admirals William D. Leahy, Ernest J. King and Chester W. Nimitz, who, although not on active duty assignments, are carried for life on active duty lists.

Army TC Has Air Division—Coincidental with formation of the first Transportation Helicopter Company at Ft. Sill, Okla., the Chief of Transportation has added an Air Transport Service Division to the organization in his office. Lt. Col. William B. Bunker has been named chief of the division, which will have branches for Administration, Training and Doctrine, Methods and Equipment and Planning. The mission of the Air Transport Service Division is to "exercise staff and technical supervision for the Chief of Transportation over all matters pertaining to troop carrier and cargo carrier command operations, to initiate, development, implement and follow up plans for efficient and effective use of such operations by the Army and to perform such air terminal and helicopter operations as may be assigned responsibility of the Chief of Transportation."

Navy All-Reserve Air Group in Far East—The first all-Reserve carrier air group has arrived in Far Eastern waters for service aboard aircraft carriers. Commanding officers of the squadrons are Lt. Comdrs. William E. Woodman of Glenview, Ill.; Glenn F. Carmichael of Olathe, Kans.; James B. Kisner of Memphis, Tenn.; and S. C. Seagraves of Dallas, Tex. The "Weekend Warriors" were given six months of training in the United States, during which the pilots switched from interceptor-type planes to heavier Corsairs and Skyraiders which carry rocket and bomb loads.

CE WAC Advisor—Maj. Ruth S. Westbrook, WAC, assigned to the Engineer Center, Ft. Belvoir, Va., has been appointed to additional duties as WAC Staff Advisor to the Chief of Engineers.

Air Officer Sets Scholastic Record—The most amazing scholastic record in the history of Ohio State University at Columbus has been achieved by Maj. Lee Van Gossick, USAF, who completed five years' work in three and three-quarter years, graduating with a BS and MS degree in aeronautical engineering and a 3.99 average. This means that he received all A's, except for a single B, this in a course in classical dynamics.

Major Gossick, who flew 90 missions over North Africa, Sicily and Italy during World War II, is now assigned to the Air Research and Development Command at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Frontline Chaplain Decorated—Chaplain (Maj.) Martin C. Hoehn of the 31st Infantry Regiment in Korea has been awarded the first bronze Oak Leaf Cluster to the Silver Star Medal for heroism in caring for the wounded during fighting near the Chosin Reservoir in November.

Wounded Sergeant Returns to Korea—Wounded after a parachute jump in Korea last October, M/Sgt. Clifford R. Rodriguez of the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team was returned to the United States for medical treatment. Now, he is back in Korea, having volunteered for service with his organization. At a recent regimental review of the 187th, first since its arrival in Korea, Sergeant Rodriguez was presented the Distinguished Service Medal for "extraordinary heroism in combat."

Ships of the Fleet—The Battle of Bataan was commemorated recently off Korea when the Australian warship HMAS Bataan provided part of the destroyer escort screen for the aircraft carrier USS Bataan, commanded by Capt. Edgar T. Neale, USN.

The high-speed minesweeper USS Endicott, whose captain is Lt. Comdr. L. W. Barnard, was in Pearl Harbor last week en route to the West Coast from eight months' action in the Far East.

Arriving from West Coast training bases, five minesweepers have reported to the Mine Force, Pacific, command at Pearl Harbor, for shakedown training and trial tests. The vessels and their commanding officers are: USS Dextrous, Lt. I. M. Laird; USS Redstart, Lt. C. W. Coe; USS Waxbill, Lt. (jg) F. J. Crozier; USS Condor, Lt. (jg) E. C. Morin; USS Cardinal, Lt. (jg) S. P. Schoenfeld, jr.

The destroyer escort USS Marsh arrived in Pearl Harbor 16 March from the Korean theater of operations. Commanding officer of the USS Marsh is Lt. Comdr. E. E. Roberts, jr., USN.

Coast Guard Reserve and M-Day—Disclosure has been made that the Bureau of the Budget authorized only one-third of the money asked by the Coast Guard for its newly established Reserve training program to provide trained personnel for port security work in case of M-Day. This was revealed in Congressional testimony made available this week. Whereas the Coast Guard asked $6,000,000 for Reserve training, the Bureau of the Budget cut this to $2,000,000, which amount was approved by the House Appropriations Committee.

Vice Adm. Merlin O'Neill, USCG, Coast Guard Commandant, responding to a question put him during the hearings, said the Coast Guard would not be able to round up a sufficient force to meet port security responsibilities if an attack were made on New York City by an aggressor nation.

Admiral O'Neill said that on M-Day the Coast Guard would need 26,000 enlisted men and 2500 officers in its Reserve, specially trained in port security work, to meet responsibilities.

West Point Appointments—The West Point Society of Western New York has adopted a resolution which calls for increasing the number of appointments to the U. S. Military Academy from within the Armed Forces by transferring at least 1062, or half of the appointments now available to members of Congress. The statement was adopted in connection with observance of the Academy's 149th anniversary.

The proposal by the alumni group brought from Representative B. W. Kearney (R-NY), the reply, inserted in the Congressional Record, that while he believes the number of appointments to enlisted men should be increased, he would be interested to know how many members of the West Point Society of Western New York were appointed by Congressmen. Congressman Kearney added: "It would make interesting reading, I am sure, in view of their resolution concerning appointments. But you see, my colleagues, they are out of the service, either by resignation, retirement or otherwise. But to have this group, or any other similar group, complain that having Congressmen appoint most of the West Point cadets, as at present, is to a great extent just another form of political patronage is interesting to say the least."

"The resolution of the West Point alumni could, in my humble opinion go still further with further provision that the Academy be more interested in obtaining lads who desire to make the Army their life's career instead of looking for prominent football and other qualified athletes," Representative Kearney concluded.

Jets For Australian AF—By the end of the year, the Royal Australian Air Force will have more than 100 jet fighter planes, including the latest Gloster Meteor 8's, according to Minister for Air and Civil Aviation T. W. White.

He added that Australian pilots are now in England learning how to handle the Canberra jet bomber, which is being produced in Australia also.

To Report on Service Camps and Stations—Investigators for the Senate Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee have completed their studies of 16 Service camps and stations and the report, now being drafted, will be released in about a month. Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, chairman of the subcommittee, said that the investigators have been at work on nine Army stations, three Navy, two Air Force, and two Marine Corps, as follows:

Army—Fort Dix, N. J., Camp Chaffee, Ark., Fort Knox, Ky., Camp Breckenridge, Ky., Fort Jackson, S. C., Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Fort Riley, Kans., Camp Roberts, Calif., and Fort Ord, Calif. Navy—Newport Naval Indoctrination Center, R. I., Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Ill., and San Diego Naval Station, Calif. Air Force—Sampson Air Force Base, N. Y. and Sheppard Air Force Base, Tex. Marine Corps—Parris Island Marine Base, S. C. and San Diego Marine Recruiting Barracks, Calif.

Army Nurse Decorated—The chief nurse of the First Mobile Surgical Hospital in Korea has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal with V for heroic achievement. Maj. Eunice Coleman was with the hospital unit in a convoy near Mungyong 9 Oct. when it was ambushed by an estimated battalion of enemy. Blocked by wrecked and burning vehicles, the convoy was forced to halt. Immediately, Major Coleman directed the nurses to cover and provided them with blankets for protection from the cold and for concealment on the barren mountainside. During the night, Major Coleman maintained a constant vigil and in the morning, after personally preparing and distributing food, organized a roadside nursing service to care for the wounded. Throughout the day she continued to perform many deeds of thoughtfulness and kindness.

"By her courageous action and unselfish devotion," the citation said, "she inspired her unit under the most hazardous and adverse conditions, and her actions on this occasion reflect high ideals of the nursing profession and the Army Medical Service."

Volunteer Physical Examinations—Army commanders in the United States are reported making preparations for giving physical examinations to Reserve officers of the Active and Inactive Reserve on a strictly voluntary basis. This is part of the Army's program to obtain latest available information on the availability and physical condition of its Reserve officers, in order to permit maximum efficiency in the Reserve program. It is emphasized that the physical examinations will be on a purely voluntary basis, but it is believed that great numbers of Reserve officers will apply for these examinations in connection with their responsibility to national defense during a period of emergency.

First Woman Army Dentist—The first woman to be commissioned in the Army Dental Corps, Capt. Helen E. Myers, reported for duty on 21 March, and was assigned by Maj. Gen. Walter D. Love, DC, USA, Chief of the Army Dental Corps, to duty at Ft. Lee, Va.

Legislation enacted last August authorized the appointment of female professional personnel for the first time in any Reserve Corps of the Army Medical Service. A wartime law authorizing the appointment of female physicians terminated in 1947.

Army Dental Corps—Lt. Col. Paul A. Miller, Chief of Prosthodontics, Walter Reed Army Hospital and Director of Complete Denture Prosthesis, Medical Department Research and Graduate School, Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., will present an illustrated lecture on "Examination and Diagnosis of Edentulous Patients" before the Virginia State Dental Society at Richmond, Va., on 11 April.

Retired Dental Officer is Police Chief—The versatility of retired military officers has been emphasized with the appointment of Col. Daniel Bratton, DC, USA-Ret., to the post of police chief in Anne Arundel County, Maryland. The post pays $5,000 a year.

The U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis is located in Anne Arundel County. Colonel Bratton makes his home at Dunromin, R.F.D. No. 2, Box 116, Glen Burnie, Md.

Motive Commended, Action Reprimanded—Military police in Honolulu have made Storekeeper Third Class Edward B. Burt of the Navy tug, USS Lipan, a free man with a "commendation for his motive but a reprimand for his course of action." A Navy spokesman said meantime the sailor's predicament might have resulted from the current Navy education program which warns military personnel against overtures from members of subversive groups.

Storekeeper Burt was arrested late last week when he slapped and "arrested" a man in civilian clothes whom he thought was a Communist. That man was Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter, USAF, head of Air Force Research and Development. The sailor and the general, both in civilian clothes, met on a Wakiki street. General Schlatter asked Storekeeper Burt why he didn't join his outfit? The sailor surmised that he was being approached by a Communist, "so I slapped him a few times, threw him into a cab and brought him to the station." General Schlatter did not press any charges.

Combat Conveyor Belt—Army Transportation Corps conveyors may carry the output of America's production lines direct to future fighting fronts. Projects engineers under Col. Richard D. Myers, commanding officer of the Transportation Research and Development Station, Fort Eustis, Va., are considering plans for fast delivery of combat cargo by conveyor system from ports, beaches, and rail heads. At these distribution points, portable, mobile, or sectionalized conveyors would start rolling the goods forward toward the fighting man in the lines via loading and dispatching points near the front.

The system would be basically power-driven with interchangeable gravity roller sections where possible, specialists at the station explained. It would run from ten feet to ten miles or more and would be designed to provide protection against theft, exposure, and marine or tropical conditions. At least four branch lines with switches would be installed at the receiving end and eight at the discharge end so that a number of cargo vehicles could be operated simultaneously, Research and Development Station engineers said.

Of rugged construction, the system could be shipped in parts by land, sea and air to the area needed. There it would move containers weighing up to 500 pounds at the rate of 150 tons per hour on grades up to 36 per cent. Systems over 1,000 feet in length would have a signal system to warn personnel of a stoppage.

Another Decoration For General Hume—One of the most decorated officers in the Armed Forces, Maj. Gen. Edgar Erskine Hume, MC, USA, Surgeon, Far East Command, has been invested as an Associate Commander (Brother) of the Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. The presentation was made recently at the British Embassy in Tokyo. The award is conferred "for acts of gallantry on land, involving risk of life, in the field of medical services."

■ FT. KNOX, KY. The Fort Knox chapter of the West Point Officers Association held its annual dinner at the officers' club last week with nearly 100 U. S. Military Academy graduates attending. Among those present were Maj. Gen. Ira P. Swift, '18, commanding general of the 3d Armored Division; Brig. Gen. John C. MacDonald, Ft. Knox chief of Staff; Brig. Gen. Raymond E. S. Williamson, '17, assistant commandant of the 3d Armored Division; and Brig. Gen. (ret) P. P. Rodas and Brig. Gen. Charles R. Col. Thomas J. Johnson (ret.), class of 1908, was the oldest graduate present while the youngest was 2d Lt. Nelson F. Ritter, '50.

The program opened with greetings by Col. Charles P. Blizel, '27. A toast to the commander-in-chief of U. S. Armed Forces, President Truman, was called by General Rodas and General MacDonald proposed a toast to the Corps of Cadets, U. S. Military Academy. The Society meets the first Thursday noon of every month at the Hershey Arms Hotel, 2600 Wilshire Blvd. for a luncheon. Generally there are about twenty-five average attendance. The program for the luncheon is usually a guest speaker with an interesting subject.

The officers at present time are: President: Wm. R. Wilson, Lt. Col., Rtd., 1916; V. P.—W. G. Bingham, Capt., Rtd., 1917; Sec. & Treas.: E. Avery Crary, Col., J. G., Res., 1926.

■ LACKLAND AFB, TEX. An Air Force plan to make its uniformed women among the world's most attractive appearing and well groomed is being placed in effect here. Lackland is the home of indoctrination training for all Women of the Air Force recruits as well as site of the USAF Officer Candidate School where WAF officers receive their initial training.

To improve on a recently inaugurated course for all WAF trainees, services of professional consultants have been procured. Mr. Robert Detchemendz and Miss Linda Ann La Rue, personal appearance specialists at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., began a series of grooming classes at Lackland on 19 March. The two conducted lectures throughout the week for permanent party enlisted women of the 3700th WAF Military Training Group.

Similar courses and classes have been required for WAF candidates in the co-educational Officer Candidate School at Lackland for several months. Professionals in the field, including Ben Shaw, head of a school for models in San Antonio, and Betty Hughes, television artist, have been named as ex-officio members of the OCS faculty in charge of grooming instruction.

For the WAFs in indoctrination training, nine hours of class and laboratory work in personal appearance is a regular requirement during the basic course.

The basic grooming class is divided into the following subjects, each of which are dealt with at length by means of demonstration charts, and lectures: general grooming, hair care and styling, basic skin care and grooming, posture and carriage, clothing, cosmetics, care of hands and nails, speech, etiquette and manners.

■ CASTLE AFB, CALIF. At their monthly luncheon and business meeting recently, members of the Officers Wives Club elected Sours was named new recording secretary; Mrs. J. R. Lipari was chosen corresponding secretary, and new treasurer is Mrs. C. V. Hanson.

Mrs. Wade is the wife of Colonel Wade, deputy commander of the 93d Bomb Wing. She has been very active in Officers Wives Club affairs, having organized and served as president of several such organizations while accompanying the Colonel on various tours of duty throughout the United States and foreign lands.

The crates will also contain 250 pocket editions of popular books, approximately 50 current magazines, and greeting cards from the Junior Red Cross. "Operation Cookie Drop" will be performed through the cooperation of many Armed Forces and civilian agencies. Some of them are: Army Transportation Corps, Engineers, Infantry, Air Force, Japanese Railroad System, Red Cross, Junior Red Cross, and individual civilians and dependents.

■ PEPPERRELL AFB, NEWFOUNDLAND. An All-States Luncheon featured the recent meeting of the Officers' Wives' Club. Club members, teamed according to home states or group of states, arranged costumes, table decorations and a parody on some outstanding feature of their home locality. Texas carried off top honors in table decorations with an old-time "Buckhorn Bar" complete with Lone Star sheriff and posse. The Great Northwest took second place with a Rocky Mountain winter sports scene. Judges for the contests were Mrs. Lyman P. Whitten, wife of Major General Whitten, Cinc. U. S. Northeast Command, Mrs. J. Gordon Pratt, wife of Colonel Pratt, CO, Pepperrell AFB, and Mrs. C. D. Smith. Mrs. Clark Miller and Mrs. Richard H. Navy Purchases Include New Torpedoes

The Navy revealed this week that it will soon have new types of high speed torpedoes in production, and that other new and improved weapons are already being produced "in quantity."

Approximately a half-billion dollars of this year's available Navy funds have been earmarked for the production program, according to Rear Adm. M. F. Schoeffel, Chief of Navy Bureau of Ordnance.

Although the present emphasis is on major production and procurement, Admiral Schoeffel said that research and development programs also receive important attention. It was pointed out that "this is true particularly in the fields of air defense, antisubmarine warfare and air warfare."

The new high speed torpedoes which are to be produced shortly can be fired from surface ships, submarines or aircraft, the Navy revealed. The announcement said they "will present a positive threat to any submarine now in existence or being built."

Contracts are also being let for air-to-air weapons for use by the Navy and Air Force against high speed planes; streamlined bombs designed for jet aircraft; new machine guns and ammunition for modern aircraft, and anti-aircraft guns with increased rates of fire and automatic radar fire control systems.

Submarine warfare will also be improved through the production of a new rocket launcher which rapidly discharges rockets having improved range and underwater performance.

Admiral Schoeffel said the Bureau of Ordnance is broadening its base of suppliers for its accelerated production and procurement program.

"The purpose is threefold," he said. "First, to establish production facilities on a one-shift basis, ready to expand the two or three shift operation if full mobilization is ordered. Second, to diversify the geographical regions involved. Third, to spread contracts among as many small and large industrial concerns as practicable."

He said, "The latter will assist in taking up slack in civilian production caused by shortages of strategic and critical materials."

Present procedure calls for placing orders for volume items with as many companies as is economically feasible.

Build More C-119's

A letter of contract for a "substantially increased" number of C-119 Packets has been received by the Fairchild Aircraft Division according to an announcement made this week by W. L. Landers, general manager, at Hagerstown, Md.

Security restrictions do not permit disclosure of the exact number on order or the total dollar value of the contract. Air Materiel Command officials did disclose, however, that both the Air Force and Navy are scheduled to receive the twin engine Flying Boxcars.

Defense Procurement Summary

During the first eight months of the current fiscal year, the Department of Defense obligated $19.7 billion for the procurement of major equipment, supplies, military construction and expansion of production facilities.

For this period, the Department of Defense summary of procurement obligations shows:

Hard goods (aircraft, ships, tanks, weapons, ammunition and other equipment) $16.3 billion.

Clothing, subsistence, petroleum products $2.2 billion.

Military construction and facilities expansion $1.2 billion.

Of the $19.7 billion obligated for procurement and construction, the Army accounts for about $8 billion, the Navy $4 billion and the Air Force $7.7 billion.

Procurement for the Mutual Defense Assistance program accounts for almost $2 billion of the $19.7 billion obligated by the Military Departments.

Over and above the $19.7 billion of recorded obligations at the end of February, contractors have been selected and advised of military requirements for an estimated $3 billion of additional procurement. The procuring agencies of the Departments have reached advanced stages of negotiation for awarding contracts for much of the remaining funds available.

As of the end of February, approximately $28.5 billion was available to the U. S. Armed Services during the current fiscal year for procurement and construction, of which approximately $13.5 billion was authorized by the Congress early in January. In addition, at the end of February approximately $3.8 billion had been allocated for procurement under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program.

Total Department of Defense obligations for the eight months of the fiscal year through February, including procurement and construction funds as well as military pay and allowances, research and development, and other activities, were approximately $27.8 billion.

Army Saves Brass

The Army has announced that it will begin manufacturing steel cartridge cases for small arms and artillery ammunition, replacing brass, in order to conserve copper and zinc.

In the event of large scale production of cartridge cases, millions of pounds of strategic metals formerly used in the manufacture of brass cartridge cases will be saved by using steel. The new steel cases may cost less than the brass despite a more complicated production process because of the lower cost of steel.

Army Ordnance experimented with steel cases during World War II when copper and zinc were in short supply. The first steel cases produced were not entirely satisfactory because of their tendency to enlarge and split at the time of fire, which prevented the normal escape of gas and the easy extraction of the cartridge cases from the gun. Through continued research after the war, the Army has developed the steel case to equal the performance of the brass case.

Many of the new weapons and ammunition under current development require physical properties in the cartridge case beyond the range of brass alloys, but well within the range of steel.

the Secretary of Defense, to the end that the best aspects of all training programs be adopted across the service lines, and, when practicable, the least expensive one be followed.

"For example, comparing only one phase of the cost of training between two comparable services, it is noted that to train approximately 200 recruits in one service requires the assignment of 13 enlisted trainers. At the same time, the other service uses six enlisted trainers to train the same number of trainees. It is recognized that there are certain other factors which have to be considered, such as different methods of range instruction between the services and the degree of assignment of commissioned personnel to direct training. However, for the purpose of pointing out the possibilities inherent in such a study, if the example given above is correct, it costs approximately $15,000 more to train 200 recruits in one service than it does in the other. In the light of hundreds of thousands of men being trained, this becomes a rather startling figure, and for this reason it is believed that it should be studied further by the Secretary of Defense."

Inspections by the Senate Committee on Armed Services through the Watch-Dog subcommittee in the 80th Congress and the Preparedness subcommittee, headed by Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex), in the current Congress have led other members to the same conclusion, now emphasized by the intention of some commanding generals to change methods of training so as to ready the troops for combat areas—methods that can be carried out the more readily through personnel now returning to this country under the rotation plan.

The newest system of training is that developed by the Air Force which studied those employed by the other services and selected what it considered the best from each. Among other things, the Air Force adopted the recent platoon system of the Marine Corps and the Navy instead of the training division method of the Army. It is understood that the Army has been studying the methods of the other services and may approve changes in its system. Already the Army has announced that it is changing to a more rigorous program which will emphasize long marches and night operations. Korea has apparently shown that this is required.

Medical Department Officers

major general, he may be retained on active duty.

It is known that Army officials, cognizant of the important role being played by the Army Medical Center and Walter Reed Army Hospital in the current emergency, were extremely desirous of keeping General Streit in active service. There was some surprise regarding the delay in his name being submitted to the Senate by the President, but conceivably this may have resulted from the Chief Executive's vacation stay in Florida.

The promotion of General Streit to permanent major general will give the Medical Department six permanent two-star officers and five permanent brigadier generals.

One permanent major general will be retired on 1 June when Maj. Gen. Raymond B. Bliss, MC, USA, Surgeon General of the Army, completes his four-year tour. Prominently mentioned to succeed General Bliss, who will be 63 years old on 17 May, and who is presently in the Far East on an inspection, is Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, MC, USA, who has been Assistant Surgeon General since 1 June 1947. General Armstrong will be 51 years old on 4 August, which would mean that if he were not named Surgeon General this year he would have another opportunity for this office.

Another officer likely to be considered for the post of Surgeon General is Maj. Gen. Joseph I. Martin, MC, USA, commanding general of the Medical Field Service School, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. He was 57 years old on 1 Feb.

Admiral Willcutts leaves the service on 1 April after 34 years of service. Upon retirement, he will be advanced to the rank of vice admiral in recognition of the fact that he was cited for outstanding performance of duty during combat in World War II. Although the Navy has never officially announced Admiral Willcutts' successor, THE JOURNAL on 3 Feb. reported that it would be Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, MC, USN, former Surgeon General of the Navy.

Meantime, quick confirmation is expected for the promotion of Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, MC, USAF, Surgeon to the President, to the rank of temporary major general. Also slated for two-star rank is Brig. Gen. Dan C. Ogle, MC, USAF, Deputy Surgeon General of the Air Force. Air Force medical officers named to be temporary brigadier generals are Col. Clyde L. Brothers, Air Surgeon, FEAF, Japan, and Col. Harold H. Twitchell, who commands Tripler Army Hospital, Hawaii. There has been speculation for many months regarding a star for Colonel Twitchell, for most officers commanding hospitals as large as Tripler hold the rank of rear admiral or brigadier general. Colonel Twitchell is the only Air Force officer commanding a top category Army hospital.

Commands Camp Gordon

Brig. Gen. John A. Dabney, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, Eighth Army, will return from Korea late this month to assume command of Camp Gordon, Ga. He replaces Brig. Gen. Halley G. Maddox, USA, named Chief of Staff for the Third Army, Ft. McPherson, Ga.

Food Industry Aids QMC

Unprocured requirements of canned fruits and vegetables from the 1950 pack have been met largely by the Army Quartermaster Corps, except in several commodities, through a combination of food industry cooperation and substitution of various items.

Action of the food industry in turning over to the armed forces supplies purchased from last year's pack and held in warehouses or wholesale stocks was a primary factor in reducing and eliminating shortages. Another factor was the substitution of other fruits and vegetables available from industry for some of the items originally listed in the requirements.

M. Auriol To Visit USNA

His Excellency M. Vincent Auriol, President of France, will visit the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., Friday, 30 March. He will present to the Academy the highest decoration bestowed by the French Government, the Croix de la Legion d'Honneur, and the Croix de Guerre. The French President's visit coincides with that of the French training cruiser Jeanne d'Arc's week-long visit to Annapolis, 28 March-5 April.

Accompanying President Auriol during his official visit will be Madame Auriol; His Excellency M. Robert Schuman, Minister of Foreign Affairs; General Paul Grossin, Military Secretary to the President; and the Hon. John F. Simmons, Chief of Protocol, U. S. Department of State.

weather picture of the entire zone of operation.

Thus did the Air Weather Service move into its supporting combat role, exemplifying its basic objective—that of helping the military planner, whether it be to aid a lone pilot on a strafing mission or in support of a major operation.

Air Weather Service is one of four organic services assigned to the Military Air Transport Service (MATS). The others are Airways and Air Communications Service, Air Rescue Service and Flight Service. Operating through its widely distributed field organization, Air Weather Service has had the responsibility for more than a decade of providing weather support for Air Force and Army activities throughout the world.

There are, however, a variety of activities in which Air Weather Service is engaged, above and beyond the routine observing, forecasting and briefing service provided at each Air Force base. For example, in addition to the Polar and Pacific areas, regular and special aerial weather reconnaissance is conducted over the Atlantic and the Gulf, all of which is designed to cover the remote ocean and land areas where ground stations cannot feasibly be located; meteorological assistance of a specialized nature is supplied military agencies engaged in rocket and guided missile operations, chemical warfare, nuclear physics, and ballistic projects; support is provided for special maneuvers; and climatological studies are undertaken for research and development, military planning and daily operations.

To accomplish the foregoing, three basic functions are involved: (1) to observe the weather; (2) to forecast the weather; and (3) to supply historical and climatological summaries.

World-Wide Observations

Weather knows no geographical or political boundaries. In order to provide the maximum service on a global scale it is necessary that observations be received from all over the world. In fact, the basic weather chart is now essentially the polar projected Northern Hemisphere map. Air Weather Service forecasts and predictions are, therefore, based on a composite world weather picture, which is the end-product of a system of local and international exchange of weather information.

To make the best possible use of collected world data requires the most careful coordination. In the United States, close liaison is maintained between the three Federal weather agencies—Navy Aerology, U. S. Weather Bureau and Air Weather Service—through participation on inter-departmental committees. World-wide coordination is achieved through U. S. membership in the World Meteorological Organizations and the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Although some 41,000 weather reports are filed daily by 10,000-odd ground, sea, and air reporting stations in the Northern Hemisphere, there still are many blank spots in the world network of observations. Obviously, these "blank spots" over the earth's surface constitute a major reason for the present limitations in forecasting. This problem offers a challenge to the meteorologists—now and in the future—to reduce through every available means the area of the unknown; to make the world coverage as nearly complete as possible. In the same way that a physician's diagnosis of some elusive human ailment often depends upon an examination of the whole anatomy, so it is with the meteorologist in diagnosing the weather behavior—the accuracy of his forecast will be governed by the amount of information with which he is equipped. With the advent of high-speed, long-range jet aircraft the problem of obtaining adequate information has become more pronounced. The viewpoint of the meteorologist is not only rapidly emerging from that of local or short-range application to that of global dimension, but also is being pressed higher and higher into the upper atmosphere. To keep pace with this concept the meteorologist has had to lift his horizon to take in the weather patterns of vast areas of

U. S. COAST GUARD

A COAST GUARD budget of $196,347,000 for fiscal year 1952, which begins on 1 July, approved by the House Appropriations Committee, representing an increase from the $195,075,000 provided for the current fiscal year, but reflecting a reduction of $1,000,000 from the total asked in the President's budget passed the House this week.

The $1,000,000 cutback was made in the section on "Acquisition, Construction and Improvements," because the Committee contended that "the projects requested were for facilities considered to be essential only from the viewpoint of improving the comfort of personnel."

The Coast Guard Reserve program is to receive $2,000,000 during the next fiscal year, compared with $1,000,000 allocated for this purpose in the current budget. Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder suggested, however, that additional funds for the Reserve program probably will be necessary.

As reported by the House group, the Coast Guard will receive $162,700,000 for operating expenses, $16,000,000 for acquisition, construction and improvements, $16,647,000 for retired pay and $2,000,000 for reserve training. For the port security program, $8,703,750 is provided.

A total of $11,109,000 was voted by the Committee for the replacement of 12 planes that will become over-age by fiscal year 1953.

In reporting the Coast Guard budget requests, the Committee praised the installation of new general accounting systems in each of the 12 district offices and noted rapid progress in the installation of strengthened systems of supply, with nine supply centers already in commission.

Coast Guard Strength

The House testimony showed that during fiscal year 1950, average strength of the Coast Guard was 23,215; during 1951 the estimated strength was placed at 26,317; while the average for fiscal year 1952 was set at 28,217. During 1952, the Coast Guard plans to have 2,514 officers, 890 warrant officers, 497 cadets and 24,316 enlisted men.

Excluding extra numbers, the 1952 budget envisages, besides the commandant, these average regular numbers: 12 rear admirals, 127 captains, 252 commanders, 451 lieutenant commanders, 568 lieutenants, 570 lieutenants (jg) and 314 ensigns. Also there will be 451 chief warrant and 451 warrant officers, a total of 902, compared with 868 for the current fiscal year.

Insofar as average regular numbers in officer ranks for 1951 is concerned, the Coast Guard reported, in addition to the commandant, 12 rear admirals, 116 captains, 232 commanders, 427 lieutenant commanders, 489 lieutenants, 503 lieutenants (jg), and 250 ensigns—a total of 2,030, plus 296 extra numbers, former Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation and former Lighthouse Service personnel.

Weather Service headquarters. The exchange is accomplished for the most part by facsimile, whereby a complete weather map may be transmitted to almost any part of the world within 22 minutes. The elimination of time lag and delay makes for better forecasts. The maintenance of this weather facsimile circuit between the centrals is an important part of the service provided by AACS.

Forecasting the Weather

The weather forecast is a most useful tool for the military tactician in the movement of troops, airplanes, ships and the combined movement of all three.

The laboratory of the forecaster—the atmosphere—is large, and, as has been indicated, is not adequately sampled by surface and upper air observations taken by the fixed weather stations or by aerial reconnaissance. For this reason there are clear-cut forecasting limitations that must first be understood before attempting to evaluate this element of the service. In addition to inadequate observations, forecasting has certain other inherent limitations, governed by the lack of knowledge of the atmospheric processes. It is appropriate to point out something of what the meteorologist can and cannot be expected to do.

Generally speaking, a forecaster can predict the measurable weather elements, such as precipitation, wind and cloud ceiling, 12 hours ahead, with an acceptable degree of accuracy; also forecasts of the general character of the weather 5 to 10 days ahead are fairly reliable.

Similarly, a reasonably good route forecast can be given for a 6 to 12 hour period for flights below 20,000 feet. Of course, the forecast might not prove out in exact detail; the forecaster may miss the height of the clouds or the wind speed for some position on the route. Yet, by intelligent use of the information given, a pilot can avoid extra-hazardous weather, cut down flight time, and properly estimate the amount of gas he will require. If the forecast is for a flight at 60,000 feet or for a 24-hour period, detailed accuracy cannot be expected, but the main features of the forecast can be depended upon. Under many conditions reasonably exact terminal forecasts are possible within acceptable limits, for periods up to 24 to 48 hours. It must be emphasized, however, that forecasts for even lesser periods of time will not always verify. It may be said that forecasts will usually be right three to four times for every time they are wrong. Certainly a resourceful pilot or commander would prefer these odds to perhaps one-to-one odds, should optional planning be left to chance.

While definite limitations are readily admitted, progress is being made in some areas of forecasting. Air Weather Service is constantly searching for and developing new observing techniques, and correcting deficiencies in old methods. The forecast is only as good as the observed data that goes into it. Anything accomplished to improve observations and to communicate the data faster will assist the forecaster.

The Air Force is actively supporting a number of research projects aimed at improving the theoretical basis of meteorology. Much hope is placed in the future use of electronic computers, which are expected to be capable of solving intricate mathematical equations within a reasonable time. Also, emphasis is being placed on the evaluation and testing of new theories and techniques with a view to adapting them to operational uses with a minimum of delay. Air Weather Service is pursuing an active program in this field aimed at more objective forecasting methods.

Climatology Serves Long-Range Planning

The third phase of the trinity of basic Air Weather Service operations is Climatology. A definition is perhaps in order. Climate is the composite or generalization of weather conditions of a region, and climatology is the science that treats therewith. Climate in one sense is military intelligence—intelligence of a type that is being effectively used in the present Korean effort.

Weather information for the climatologist is a non-perishable product. Data that may be too inadequate or delayed to meet immediate needs, become very important for climatological use.

During World War II the military planners gradually became aware of weather as a necessary factor in most phases of strategic and tactical warfare. As the war progressed they began to call on the weather technicians for advice on equipment specifications, construction problems, and overall plans, and asked for weather data to help solve specific problems.

The Pacific Airlift offers an excellent example of the practical employment of climatology. From the inception of the present hostilities, Air Weather Service has provided the Pacific Airlift commanders with an estimate of the hours that strategic bases, both in the U. S. and in the Pacific, would have instrument, ground controlled approach or closed conditions for particular periods. These studies have permitted planning for maximum aircraft utilization. It must be remembered, however, that this type of data is not a weather forecast; it is a summary of probabilities based on long-standing historical records covering the areas involved. Such planning information is effectively used to supplement the continuous daily forecasts made throughout the operation.

Effectiveness in applying the principles of climatology is achieved in direct proportion to the completeness and accuracy of the historical weather records available. To insure the best possible reservoir of such data, the three national services cooperated to set up a Joint Data Control Unit at New Orleans for the assembling of world-wide information from all possible sources. Today, there are more than 180 million punchcards on file, containing information going back for many years. Each service has access to this material for use in preparing special studies. The Data Control Unit is a good example of the quiet, behind-the-scenes, normally unrecognized and unrewarded efforts of a small group of specialists (about 200) who produce the bulk of the meteorological intelligence used in our strategic plans and estimates.

The Air Weather Service is finding a constantly increasing demand for its services in an ever-widening sphere of activity. Military planners recognize that military operation, both in peace and in war, can be accomplished most effectively by taking into full account all aspects of "weather."
